

“How wonderful it is that nobody need wait a single moment before starting to improve the world.” - Anne Frank. These are the words that recent University of Denver graduate, Jacob S. Needell has allowed to take hold in his life. Majoring in business and growing up in condominiums his entire life has made for a pleasant combination when founding his very own property management firm. Needell believes that his job entails more than just managing buildings and residential complexes; it is a way for him to connect with others. As many of his peers shuffle around to figure out what it is they actually want to do with their post-college lives, this twenty-two year old has already found a way to put what he knows to work for him.

In explanation for how he found his new, budding career, Needell states that, “I was always around property managers and gained generalized knowledge of the industry through my younger life. With this knowledge I purchased a condominium during college that I lived in and managed throughout my remaining years in school. During this time I became the property manager for the homeowners association that I belonged to and have been managing it ever since. With this knowledge I decided this was something that I could do as a profession and the rest is history!” In all of these things, it seems as though planning ahead is something you can never do enough of. Today JSN Property Management LLC is responsible for roughly 39 properties in the Denver area, and much like Needell, with time his project will continue to mature and grow into something outstanding that Colorado can be proud of.
